THE UNITED STATES census for 1880, shows, there are in Utah, in round numbers, 120,000 Mormons; all other residents, 24,000.

Salt Lake Tribune editorial March 28: "In all the discussions of the effect of the Edmunds bill, it has not been disguised by the advocates of that measure that it was framed and passed for the purpose of transferring the political power in Utah Territory from the Mormons to the Gentiles. It was so stated in the Senate debates, and afterwards reiterated in the House debate on the bill."

THE VOTE for George Q. Cannon, at the delegate election on November 2, 1880, was 18,568.

The vote for Allen G. Campbell at the delegate election on November 2, 1880, was 1,357.

Salt Lake Tribune Editorial, "Figuring Up," March 31st, 1882: "So, then we have three to one against you, Mr. HERALD, and of course you are gone. There's nothing like being accurate in your figures, you see; and the fellow who counts up first is sure to be beaten."

THE CONFERENCE announcements of business houses encroach upon the HERALD's reading matter this morning.

THE ST. LOUIS petition to the President asking the appointment to a Utah commissionership of Miss Phoebe W. Cousins is highly complimentary to that lady and her ability and fitness for the office. It closes as follows: "As woman is typical of justice, as Blackstone has well written, we are confident that the appointment of Miss Cousins will insure model government, and therefore the contentment of the people of that territory under the administration of the new law." Many of the best-known and more prominent persons in St. Louis have signed the petition, such names as James E. Yeatman, George Knapp, D. M. Hosmer, William Hyde, S. M. Dodd, and S. M. Breckinridge appearing in the list. There is very little hope or prospect that Miss Cousins will be nominated. President Arthur is not a woman suffragist, nor is he in any sense what is called a "woman's rights" man. It is true he has appointed some women to responsible offices as in the case of the Louisville post-office, where he continued a lady as postmistress; but in each of such appointments the peculiar circumstances surrounding the case made it necessary to confer the office upon the woman, or commit an act of injustice. As women are entitled to vote in this Territory we think it proper and consistent rather than otherwise that a woman should have a place on the commission to guard her rights at the polls, especially when a woman comes forward who is so abundantly qualified to perform the difficult duties of the office as Miss Cousins unquestionably is.

STAR ROUTE FOOLISHNESS.

The government law officers are again assuming a show of earnestness in the star-route prosecutions, just as if everybody, virtually, had not come to understand by this time that these cases were a huge sham. The late attorney-general was too dignified to work, and the late postmaster-general was too small to fill the hole. One entrusted his duties to light weight subordinates, and the other shouldered a good deal more than he could wad-die under. A loud outcry was made that the government had been and was being robbed, and the impression was sought to be created that the star-routers were a band of thieves who had their agents and corrupt employees in the various departments of the national administration. The howl went up a year ago, and the foulest nest ever unearthed was promised to be immediately uncovered. We do not know how many arrests have been made, how many indictments found, nor how much money this "breed" has cost the nation; but this much is known, that the only conviction brought about is of a couple of insignificant fellows in Pennsylvania, who as bondsmen swore they had more property than the tax collector could find. It is also believed that the suit has cost the people more money than will ever be recovered from the star routers, who, if they have been thieves, seem to have behind them the authorization and endorsement of Congress for all their actions. President Arthur, it is pretty well understood, understands the situation thoroughly, and knows how foolish it is to proceed with the cases which involve certain defeat of the government, but his political foes are crowding him and his administration into the corner, compelling a prosecution of the foolish business or accepting the censure for protecting those who have been stealing the people's money. But it seems as if it were about time for the curtain to drop on this farce. Whether or not the star route contractors are guilty, there is not the ghost of a show for their conviction and punishment. They have headed government at every turn, and will do so to the end, when the people will have the grim satisfaction of knowing that all that has been accomplished is the sending of some of their good money after the bad, in feeling lawyers, hiring detectives, paying witnesses, and bearing the expenses of costly and unnecessary trials.
